

THE COALITION FOR RESPONSIBLE SAND AND SILICATES

Building a future where sand and silicates are sourced, used and produced responsibly

member prospectus 2026

Who we are

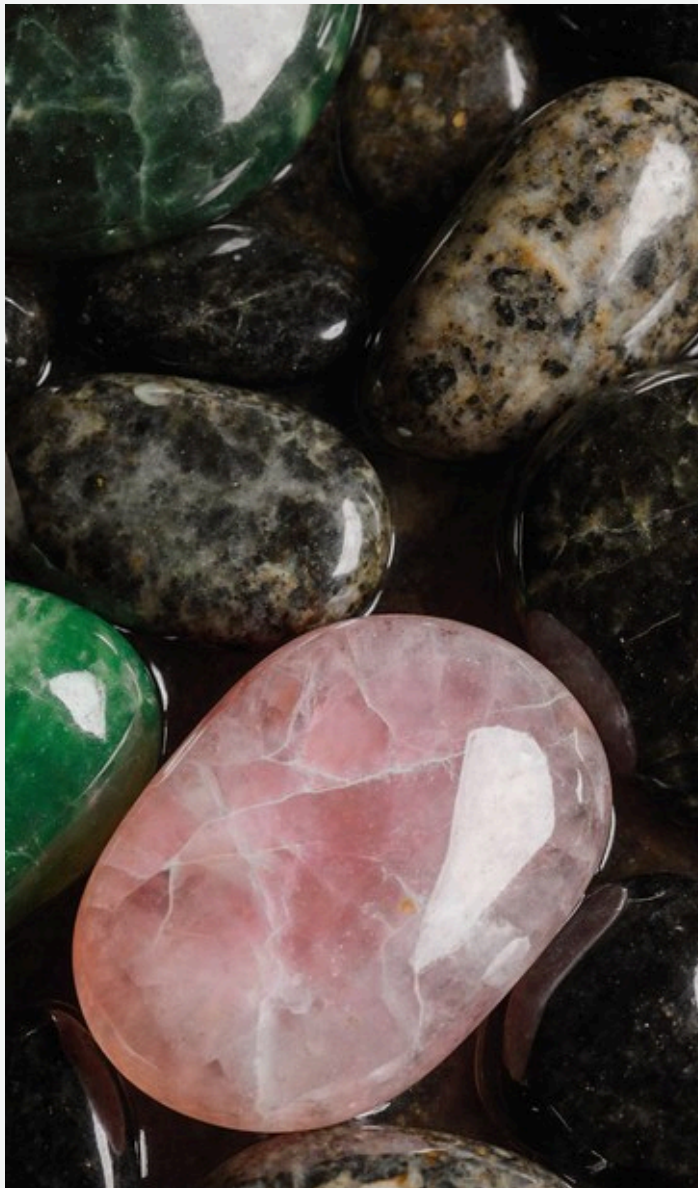

The Coalition for Responsible Sand and Silicates is the first and only organisation dedicated to responsible sourcing and production practices for these materials. We bring civil society, research and industry together, as equals, to build a future where sand and silicates are sourced, used and produced responsibly. We're member-driven, independent and multistakeholder in our roots and in our values. As of our public soft launch, these organisations helped build the Coalition, and the community is growing.

WHAT WE MEAN WHEN WE SAY 'RESPONSIBLE SAND AND SILICATES'

Sand and silicates are responsibly sourced when actors across their supply chain and beyond treat responsibility as a direction of travel, not a threshold to cross. It begins with being responsive. It means proactively reducing harm. It reaches for doing better.

What we do

Our strategy 2026-2028

Today, sand and silicates sit outside the frameworks that guide responsible sourcing. They stay largely unseen in supply chains, and the guidance that exists is scattered, which leaves the people who source, produce and rely on these materials without a clear path. We want to change that. Our aim is for responsible sourcing to become the mainstream for these materials, so that caring for communities, ecosystems and supply chains is simply how they're handled. We get there faster together, and that's our role: a shared platform that carries the whole field from now to next, rather than leaving each organisation to find its own way. The timing is right. Demand is rising, expectations and regulation are shifting, and there's real opportunity in building more resilient, more responsible supply chains now, while the direction is still taking shape.

What we've achieved so far

- 01 We put sand and silicates on the OECD's responsible-minerals agenda for the first time. We asked whether these materials belong in responsible minerals supply, and we've opened a dialogue at the OECD Forum that's continued every year since.
- 02 We enabled the first OECD study on due diligence for these materials. It confirmed they belong on international agendas, and set out the gaps existing standards leave open.
- 03 We convened our founding multistakeholder group. A first Founders meeting in Barcelona in July 2025, hosted by Roca Group, shaped our purpose and scope. A second established our Advisory Council and set our course to independence.
- 04 We framed what responsible sand and silicates means. An Interim Council meeting in London in December 2025, with a series of sprint calls, gave us our position paper and an OECD-aligned responsibility framework.
- 05 We became an independent organisation. We registered under Australian law, and we're opening membership and launching publicly in 2026, with our first guidance and projects running from 2026 to 2028.

Where we're going next

- Our responsibility framework. We're building a shared, OECD-aligned view of what good looks like for sourcing, production, transport and use. It's the spine the rest of the guidance builds on.
- Modular guidance, as needed. From that framework we'll develop practical, user-friendly guidance for materials and sectors, so members can act with confidence in their own context.
- Into practice. As the groundwork allows, we'll move from guidance to demonstration, so responsible practice shows in the field and not only on paper.

Membership

Joining the Coalition is how you make your commitment to advancing responsible sand and silicates visible. Your organisation can join as a Voting Member or a Supporter member. Voting Members hold a formal role in governance, including the right to vote at the Annual General Meeting. Supporter members take part fully in the Coalition's activities and benefits, without the formal governance role.

► What every member gets

A Coalition membership opens direct access to the tools, people and knowledge shaping this field.

- The only credible commitment signal that exists for these materials, visible to clients, suppliers and regulators, with the right to use the Coalition logo.
- Access to the only responsibility framework on this topic. Apply the Coalition's position and OECD-aligned framework for sourcing, using and producing sand and silicates responsibly.
- A seat at the table that is shaping what good looks like, across five material groupings, from natural aggregates and stone to high-purity materials.
- One hub for global knowledge. Research, knowledge and practice, drawn together from across our network of Founders, members and partners.
- Projects that close real gaps. From construction sand and aggregates to industrial sands, clays for ceramics and a labelling scheme.
- A route to innovation. Connect with companies at the forefront of circularity and innovation in materials and machinery.
- A thought leadership position. Stand alongside the organisations shaping how this field is understood.
- One platform, one big voice that raises awareness of these materials and addresses their invisibility.

► What we ask of you

- Make a public commitment
- Take active part
- Show the way
- Pay the annual fee
- Contribute what you know
- Report regularly

JOIN IN 2026 AS A FOUNDER

- A permanent seat at the Advisory Council.
- A direct hand in the Coalition's DNA and priorities, with first choice of the early demonstration projects and a say in scoping them.
- Recognition as a Founder, and a credible claim to early action and leadership on responsible sand and silicates.

"As a Founder, we saw this issue early and helped create the first shared definition of what responsible sand and silicates means. We're building the field's infrastructure from the ground up."

Fee structure

The Coalition is multistakeholder by design. Civil society, research and industry sit together, and the seats carry equal weight. Fees are tiered to reflect the size and type of organisation.

WHO IS AT THE TABLE	MEMBERSHIP BENEFITS		ANNUAL FEE (AUD)
PUBLIC GOOD ACTORS
Civil society and NGOs Environmental, human rights and community organisations, with the independence to challenge and validate	Shine a light on risks as they happen, and on where things can be done better. A constructive space to work with industry and government on what can be done together.		Free
Research and academia Universities, institutes and intergovernmental bodies that build the evidence base	Connect your expertise to real supply chains and put it to work. Help set a shared research agenda with other members.		Free
Government and intergovernmental Ministries, regulators and multilateral bodies	An informal space to talk with civil society and industry, and a shared evidence base you can rely on. A chance to review your own practices as a major buyer of these materials.	National, subnational and multilateral	0 to 8,000
INDUSTRY
Industry Upstream, midstream and downstream: extraction and trade, processing and manufacturing, and final products	A say in the checks your customers ask of you, recognition for responsible practice, and resilience as buyers and rules shift. One framework and a collective voice across the chain.	BY ANNUAL TURNOVER Under AUD$5M AUD$5M to AUD$50M AUD$50M to AUD$1B Over AUD$1B	5,000 10,000 20,000 30,000

Fees are set by the Board of Directors with advice from the Advisory Council. They may be revised up or down in future, depending on member numbers and other sources of income.

Joining, and other ways in

A simple process

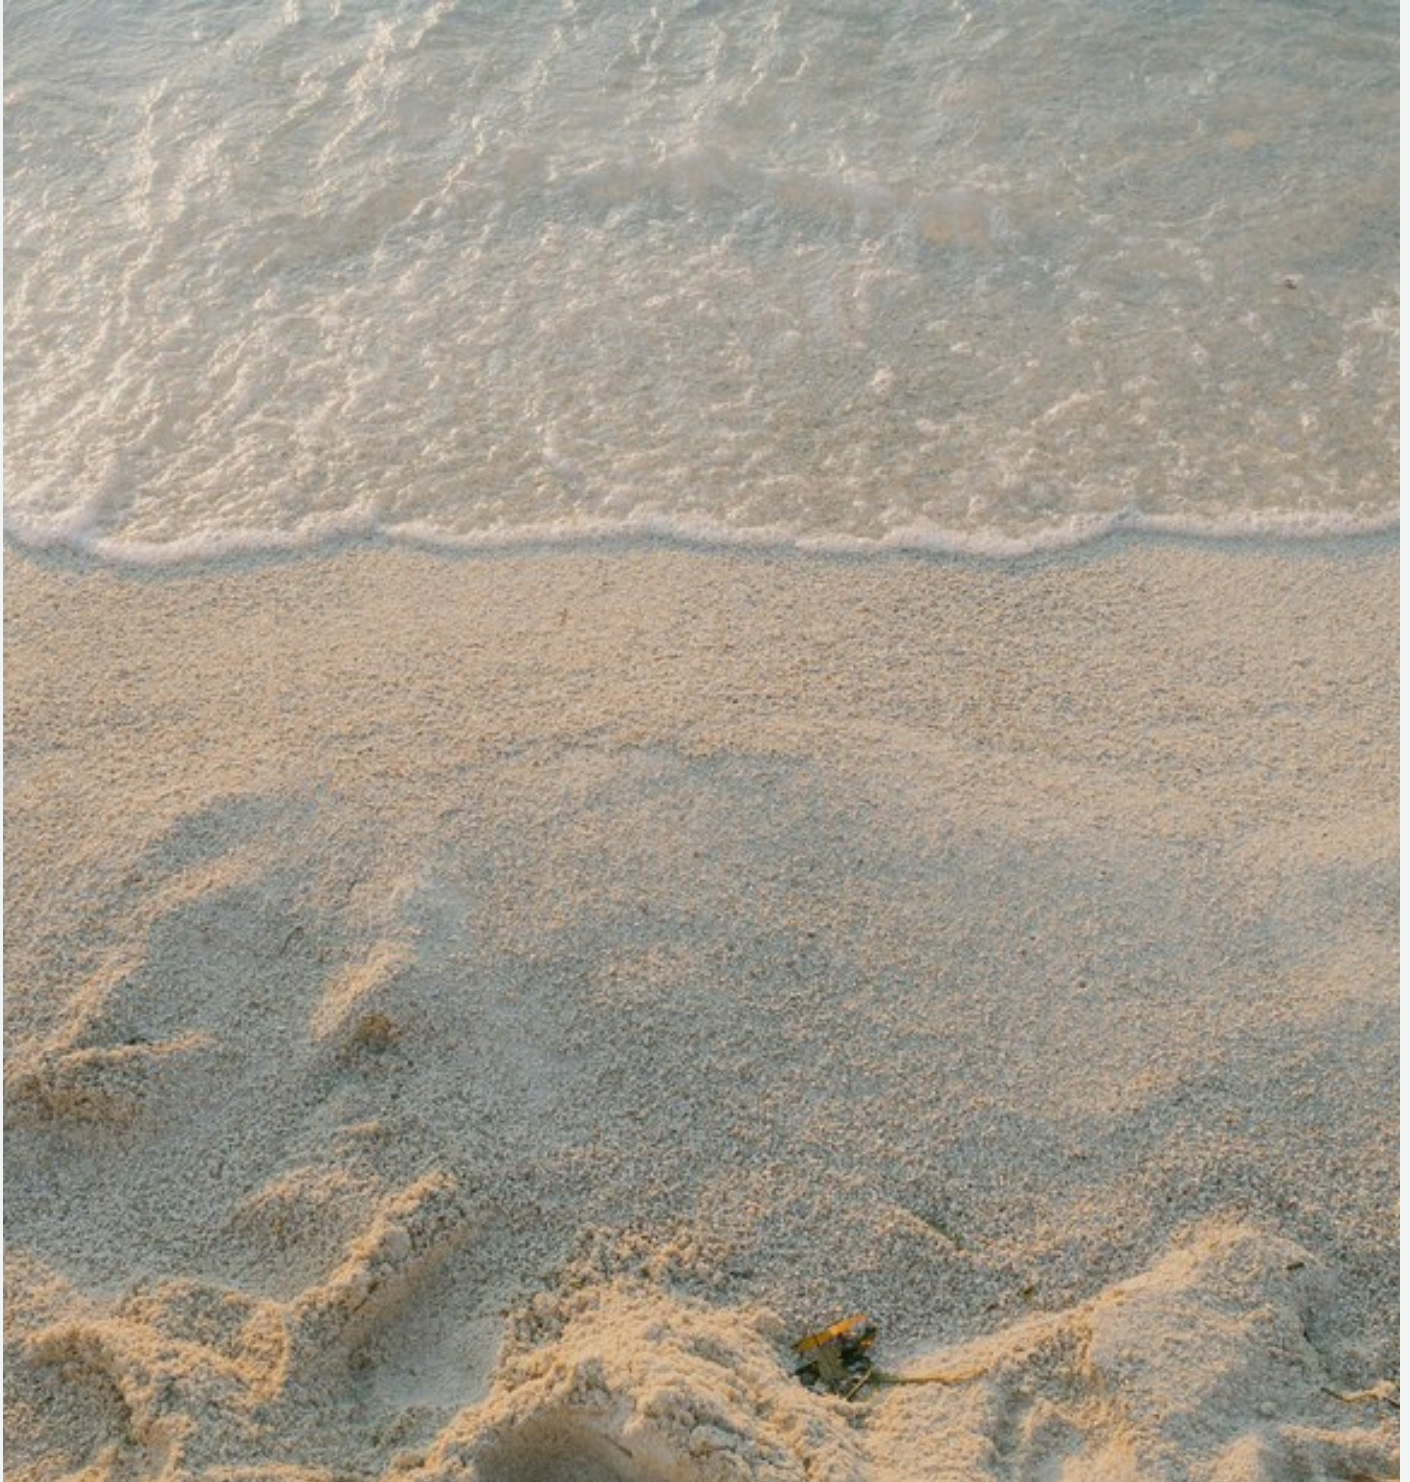

Read the founding documents so you know what you're committing to, then reach out to the Secretariat to arrange a call. A short application form sets out the membership you'd like, and peer members review it to assess fit.

Flexible payments possible

Pay in instalments, half-yearly or quarterly. We'll work with you on timing.

We meet you where you are

We welcome conversations about other ways to engage and contribute, and we will help you find the right route in.

TALK TO US

The simplest way to find the right option for your organisation is a conversation. Contact the Secretariat to arrange a call, at membership@responsiblesand.org.
